ADDRESSING VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN: PRODUCING EVIDENCE

There is little evidence on the effectiveness of interventions aimed at reducing violence against women (VAW) in Latin America and the Caribbean. In response, the IDB Gender and Diversity Division is undertaking rigorous impact evaluations—mostly using experimental methodologies—of projects designed to prevent VAW and to provide integrated services to survivors. Our goal is to identify best practices that can be replicated and scaled up.

ACTION AREAS

- Economic Empowerment
- Safe Spaces
- Youth
- Survivor Support
Close to 1,600 students and 100 teachers participated during 2014 in this pilot program promoting peaceful coexistence in schools and the prevention of gender violence among adolescents. The program provided training for youth and supported awareness-raising activities in the school community. The evaluation measures the short-term impact of the program on the incidence of psychological, physical, and sexual violence in intimate adolescent relationships, sexist and violent attitudes, and knowledge of available resources.

EL SALVADOR

CIUDAD MUJER (WOMEN´S CITY)

Ciudad Mujer is a network of centers managed by the government of El Salvador’s Secretariat for Social Inclusion that offers integrated public services to improve women’s quality of life. Each center houses offers more than 30 services grouped into five modules: sexual and reproductive health, violence against women, economic empowerment, collective education and child care.

The evaluation measures the short-term impact of the Ciudad Mujer Program on the use of public services by Salvadoran women between 8 and 15 months following the opening of the three first centers.

COLOMBIA

LINEA 123-MUJER (HOTLINE 123-WOMAN)

Linea 123-Mujer Program creates a call referral system for cases of violence against women that links the National Police and the Secretariat for Women of Medellin. Created in 2011, the hotline provides personalized support to victims of physical, psychological or economic violence. The evaluation is based on 749 interviews with women who called to report gender-based violence in the last three months of 2014.

The evaluation measures the impact of the Linea 123-Mujer Program on the number of experiences of intimate partner violence reported by women who accessed these services.

MEXICO

AMOR, PERO DEL BUENO (LOVE, BUT THE GOOD KIND)

Close to 1,600 students and 100 teachers participated during 2014 in this pilot program promoting peaceful coexistence in schools and the prevention of gender violence among adolescents. The program provided training for youth and supported awareness-raising activities in the school community.

The evaluation measures the short-term impact of the program on the incidence of psychological, physical, and sexual violence in intimate adolescent relationships, sexist and violent attitudes, and knowledge of available resources.
